The principle is now fully recognised that laws to regulate the rate of interest are mischievous in their effects, and instead of removing the evils attendant on and greedy lenders to resort to various obannumes on untartterms, in order to defeat these laws, a still bigher rate of interest being exacted in such transactions. The old saying that it is possible to drive a coach and four through any Act of Parliament was the usury laws. Notwithstanding all the enactments levelled against him, the usurer has always existed, and always will exist as tress continue. The repeal of the old maury laws was effected in this Colony by two Ordinances, 7 of 1844 and 5 of 1856. The Bill now before the Council is a very brief one, consisting only of four short sections, and merely consolidates the existing law repealing the old usury laws and fixes a rate of interest for the guidance of the Court in cases where interest is payable on any contract but the rate has been left unfixed. This rate is twelve per cent., but it is provided that it shall be lawful for the court to allow a lower rate if the circumstances of the case render it just and expedient. When, however, a money-lender can prove an agreement on the part of the borrower to pay any specified rate of interest, no matter how high, the Orders in Council for Government of H.B.M. it may be taken for granted that the Viceroy of Chihli would not have advocated the selection of either an incompetent or an antiprogressive man for so important a post, and especially to replace an official of exceptional parts like the Marquis Termo. It is quite comprehensible that LI HUNG-CHANG might wish to have a Minister in London whose policy would be moulded by his wishes, and whose conduct would be shaped according to his instructions. The report on the external trade of Bengal with Nepaul, Sikhim, and Bhutan, for the year 1884-5, which has just been received from India, full of interesting and gratifying matter. The various colonial banks doing business in In the first place it shows an increase of trade London have appointed a committee for the pur-pose of opposing the demand for the payment of place it holds forth brighter prospects for the future commerce of the Himalayan regions than and Wellington, and by the Melbourne Harbour able light on the future chances as well as the business requirements of any traffic between Autwerp will be a port of call for the new line India and Thibet. We therefore quote them in A severe frost was experienced in England of the trade: -"It is unfortunately impossible to make any approach to an accurate estimate of .... the expansion of trade that would follow if our native merchants were admitted without re-Rs.1.54.805, against Rs.8.080, as shown by the registration officers. Several instances of this nature have been brought to notice during the year under review. There was a considerable increase in the recorded expert-of piece goods, indigo, tobacco, and copper, and in the recorded imports of horses, blankets, musk, and yak tails. though the figures only represent the trade passing at the time when the registering officers have been present at their stations. There is ample evidence, however, that the most valuable and portable articles frequently escape notice altogether. The trade of Thibet with India is now carried on chiefly by Nepaulese and Thibetans. stations. There is no regular customs establish-very large trade would spring up, and English goods would not only haves large market in the valley of the Sanno, but find their way into Southern Mongolia and Thibet. With our railway to Darjeeling and good roads to the neigh-bouring frontier, it only requires commercial organization and freedom from obstruction to insure a flourishing trade between Calcutta and Lhassa." Some steps have been taken to meet the special requirements of the Lhassa market The Woollen Cloth Manufactory at Senju has as the following passage, which deserves careful consideration, will show:- "During the year 1883-4 an allotment of Es. 100, was sanctioned by Government for the purpose of the payment of a commission to the shopkeepers in British territory who might be intrusted with the sale of the tea manufactured by Messrs. Cresswell and Co. after the method of the brick tea of Thibet. The result has, however, been far from satisfactory. The more the question is examined the more plain it becomes that if the trade were freed Indian to must displace China tea in the markets of Thibet. It is believed that good even on the improbable assumption that the Thibetans would impose an import duty equivalent to that levied by the Chinese Government, for annas a pound, while the worst China tea commands a price of Rs.1-6 a pound.
